MARK SCHEME

Maximum Mark: 60

Published

This mark scheme contains the instructions and marking guidance that our examiners used to mark candidate responses for this component.

Before they start marking, examiners complete a standardisation process. They review a range of candidate responses and discuss the mark scheme in detail to agree which answers can and cannot be accepted. Examiners award marks where it is clear that candidate responses have met the requirements of the mark scheme. These requirements may vary between different components or different versions of the same component, depending on the exact requirements of the question and the candidate responses seen during the standardisation process.

Sometimes, our mark schemes may allow marks to be awarded to responses which contain elements that are factually incorrect or for content not covered by the syllabus. We do this in response to the demands of a specific question to support candidates and make sure that our assessments are fair. However, these allowances should not be used as a guide for teaching and learning.

We cannot discuss the mark scheme with schools, and we recommend that schools read the mark scheme together with the assessment material and the Principal Examiner Report for Teachers.

This document consists of 100 printed pages.

General marking principles

All examiners must apply these marking principles when marking candidate responses.

|---|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 1 | Examiners must award marks for each response in line with: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>the specific content defined in the mark scheme</li><li>the specific skills defined in the mark scheme or in the level descriptions</li><li>the standard of response required as exemplified by the standardisation scripts.</li></ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| 2 | Examiners must award whole marks (not half marks, or other fractions).                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| 3 | Examiners must award marks positively . This means that: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>marks are not deducted for errors or omissions</li><li>marks are awarded for correct/valid answers as defined in the mark scheme and also for other valid answers which go beyond the scope of the syllabus and mark scheme referring to your team leader as appropriate</li><li>the quality of spelling, punctuation and grammar are judged only when the mark scheme indicates that these features are specifically assessed in the question. However, the meaning of all responses must be unambiguous.</li></ul> |
| 4 | Examiners must consistently apply the requirements of the mark scheme and any rules for what to do when candidates have not followed instructions correctly.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| 5 | Examiners must use the full range of marks defined in the mark scheme, unless limited by the quality of the candidate responses seen.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| 6 | Examiners must award marks according to the mark scheme and must not award marks with grade thresholds or grade descriptions in mind.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |

Annotations guidance for centres

Examiners use a system of annotations as a shorthand for communicating their marking decisions to one another. Examiners are trained during the standardisation process on how and when to use annotations. The purpose of annotations is to inform the standardisation and monitoring processes and guide the supervising examiners when they are checking the work of examiners within their team. The meaning of annotations and how they are used is specific to each component and is understood by all examiners who mark the component.

We publish annotations in our mark schemes to help centres understand the annotations they may see on copies of scripts. Note that there may not be a direct correlation between the number of annotations on a script and the mark awarded. Similarly, the use of an annotation may not be an indication of the quality of the response.

The annotations listed below were available to examiners marking this component in this series.

Assessment objectives*AO1

An ability to recall, select, organise and deploy knowledge of the syllabus content.

AO2

An ability to construct historical explanations using an understanding of:

- cause and consequence, change and continuity, similarity and difference
- the motives, emotions, intentions and beliefs of people in the past.

Table 1: Use this table to give marks for each candidate response for AO1 and AO2 for part (b) of each question.

| 1(c)     | Level 3 – Explains one side. 4–6 marks One Level 3 mark for each explanation. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The war of 1859 was the most important conflict in the fight for Italian unification. This was despite France bringing the war to an early end against the wishes of Piedmont and Cavour resigning. It was important because it did see Austria being defeated on the battlefield. It never regained its strength in Italy, making unification easier to achieve. It also led to Piedmont doubling its land and population. They gained Lombardy in 1859 as a result of the Peace of Villafranca and in 1860 the people in Emilia and Tuscany voted to join Piedmont. This would not have happened without the war and meant Piedmont was strong enough to take the final steps to Italian unification.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Garibaldi's victories in Sicily and then in Naples were very important. To achieve unification, the south of Italy had to be won. There was little chance of Piedmont either wanting, or being able, to do this. In 1860 Garibaldi, with his 1000 volunteers, defeated the Neapolitan troops on Sicily. Garibaldi then returned to the mainland and took the city of Naples. This forced Cavour to act because he was afraid of Garibaldi setting up a rival regime in the South and threatening the Papal States. This led to Garibaldi handing over his conquests to Piedmont, and Italian unification was nearly complete.</li> </ul> |       |          |

It was the most industrialised state in Germany and produced more resources such as coal and iron. This led to other German states looking to Prussia for trade. This became particularly important when Prussia set up the Zollverein. This made trade between its members easier and more profitable. This led to German states beginning to look to Prussia for economic leadership and this also brought Prussia closer to these states politically. Prussia gradually became the natural state to lead unification.</li> </ul> | 6     |          |

They had lots of grievances such as slow promotion, bad pay and pensions. But the biggest grievance was over the paper cartridges used for the new Enfield rifles. There were rumours that the grease on the cartridges contained tallow from beef and lard from pork. This was offensive to Hindus and Muslims. This led to sepoys in Meerut rebelling. This shows it was just a mutiny.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>It was a national uprising. This was because of the Westernisation that was taking place across India and especially what Indians saw as threats to their religious beliefs, for example, allowing Hindu widows to remarry and banning sati and child marriage. Local rulers, angered by the British taking over native states, joined the rebellion, turning it into an uprising against British rule.</li> </ul> |       |          |

Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy were in the Triple Alliance. They promised to defend each other if they were attacked by other powers. At the same time, Britain, France and Russia were in the Triple Entente. Although this was not a military alliance, the existence of the two blocs meant that a dispute between two countries could easily drag in other powers, resulting in a general European war.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The assassination was key in causing the war. Europe was in a tense situation but needed a spark to set the war off. The assassination provided this. It caused the war between Serbia and Austria which then dragged in Russia to support Serbia. This made Germany support Austria and declare war on Russia and France. It was the assassination that caused all this.</li> </ul> |       |          |

| 6(c)     | Level 3 – Explains one side. 4–6 marks One Level 3 mark for each explanation. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The remilitarisation of the Rhineland was more important because it broke the terms of the Treaty of Versailles. When Britain and France did nothing about it, Hitler realised that he could get away with a more aggressive foreign policy, which he then carried out. Two years later he united Germany and Austria. Doing nothing meant that Britain and France had missed the chance to stop Hitler without a full-scale war.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Anschluss was very important because it took Hitler one step closer to achieving one of his main aims – to unite all German speakers in a Greater Germany. Austrian Nazis caused trouble in Austria and this allowed Hitler to put pressure on the Austrian government to ask Germany for help. German troops marched in and took over. This encouraged Hitler to carry on with his aggressive behaviour and he turned his attention to the Sudetenland.</li> </ul> |       |          |

A number of warships were also sunk. In 1917 Britain was near defeat because of the campaign. Britain was running out of food such as wheat and supplies for the war effort. It was thought that it only had enough supplies for a few months. This shows how successful the campaign was.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The campaign was a failure. This was mainly due to Britain making a lot of use of the convoy system. This is where many merchant ships crossed the Atlantic in groups, protected by warships. This protection made it more dangerous for the U-boats. Attacking a convoy was much more difficult than picking off isolated merchant ships that had no protection. The success of the Allied tactics led to tens of thousands of American troops being transported to Europe.</li> </ul> |       |          |

This meant that he could get rid of any opposition such as the communists. This made his hold on power much stronger and helped him in the election in March 1933.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The Night of the Long Knives was more important in Hitler's consolidation of power. Röhm and the SA were a real threat to Hitler. Röhm wanted Hitler to follow more radical policies and also demanded that the SA take over control of the army. The SA was very powerful and Röhm could use it against Hitler. Hitler also needed the support of the Germany army. Hitler, therefore, had good reasons to assassinate Röhm. This made Hitler much safer in power.</li> </ul> |       |          |

For the Nazis the invasion of Russia was about destroying the Jews and communists in Russia and winning land for ‘living space’. At first the German advance into Russia was rapid. This meant that they took over land with many Jews living there. To deal with them, killing squads followed the German army and slaughtered the Jews they came across. They used mass shootings to kill them. They also slaughtered Slavs and Roma, and indeed anyone that the Nazis thought were inferior. The Nazis wanted this land as living space for Germans, and so the more land they won, the more people they had to murder.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The Final Solution could not have happened without the antisemitism of many people in Germany. Far more women entered the labour force and this helped them improve their standard of living. An important advance was more women getting professional jobs like engineers and doctors. Creches were provided so that they could have children as well as work. They were also given paid holidays. By the end of the 1930s nearly half the workforce were women.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Stalin's policies did not benefit all workers. Workers were driven hard to meet tough targets. Discipline at work was often harsh if they did not meet the targets. They could be fined, lose their jobs or even be arrested. Another problem was that in the 1930s wages actually fell. So, workers had to work harder for less money.</li> </ul> |       |          |

In fact, it was a disaster. Criminal gangs took over the production and supply of alcohol with many of the public going along with it. The gangs fought with each other. For example, Al Capone had an empire of crime including bootlegging, bribery and protection rackets and was involved in violence like the St Valentine's Day Massacre. Prohibition led to an upsurge in crime and violence, and the drinking did not stop.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Prohibition did lead to a fall in drinking alcohol, as much as a 70% fall. There was also less drunkenness and fewer people arrested for getting drunk. This led to better health with fewer people suffering from cirrhosis. There was an overall improvement in public health. Another success was that the campaign for it gave some women political skills and confidence which led more women to get involved in politics.</li> </ul> |       |          |

Explain your answer. Level 5 – Explains both sides and supports a valid judgement on ‘how far’. 10 marks One explanation or more on each side. Roosevelt did conduct a very effective campaign in the election. However, it is difficult to see how he could have lost the election. This is because of the dreadful state of the country with mass employment and many people’s lives ruined. On top of this, there was Hoover’s failure to deal with the hardship and all the problems facing the country. Even if Roosevelt had run an ordinary campaign, he would still have won. Level 4 – Explains both sides. 7–9 marks For candidates to be awarded this level they must have one explanation on each side. Seven marks for one explanation on each side; one additional mark for each additional explanation on either side. | 10    |          |

As a result, the defences of Singapore were designed for seaborne attacks. However, the Japanese attacked through the Malayan jungle and caught the forces in Singapore unprepared. They used bikes to travel through the Malayan jungle at incredible speed which caught the Allies by surprise. They had thought it was virtually impossible to get through the jungle. When the Japanese reached Singapore it caught the Allies by surprise. They were not ready for such an attack over land.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The Allied troops in Singapore were in a desperate situation and were not capable of defending Singapore. Many were not properly trained and were inexperienced. They were not armed as well as the Japanese. Their water supply had been badly damaged and so they were short of water and they were running out of food. On top of this they had little food or petrol. The Japanese bombed Singapore and the Allies had very few planes to counter this. It was not surprising that the Allied troops were unable to defend Singapore.</li> </ul> |       |          |
